Why I Support the CPP: "As the highest industry standard, the CPP represents an on-going challenge for personal and professional growth and a level of credibility that is second to none."

How the CPP Benefits Me: "While working on the RCMP Diamonds Project, a national policing strategy for the emerging Canadian diamond industry, a unique partnership with private security was created to address various issues. My contribution to that partnership evolved from a position of knowledge, credibility, professionalism, and understanding. The CPP provides that vehicle. When I work side by side with the private sector, we instantly speak the same language."

Value of the CPP: "The CPP designation promotes excellence and commitment to the security profession. The CPP program provides a solid foundation and understanding of security industry practices, technologies, and issues. This benefits both the individual and the organization."

Why Security Professionals Pursue the CPP Designation: "Obtaining the CPP is a commitment to professionalism and knowledge, and a challenge to distinguish yourself within the industry."

Achievements: Cpl. Munn has served in several postings in Canada, including a one-person post in Pelly Bay, Northwest Territories, in the High Arctic. She has received specialized diamond industry training including overseas assignments in Australia, Britain, Belgium, and Africa. As the recipient of a Canada 125 national medal, she was recognized for outstanding community service. She lectures at various RCMP training courses, as well as to public and private sector groups. Cpl. Munn has been the Coordinator of the Yellowknife Law Enforcement Liaison Group since 1998. She is an active promoter of ASIS and partnerships between the public and private sectors.
