Corinne Huskey, CPP, believes there is a direct connection between the security industry and the corporate and business worlds. She has spent the last 35 years working to improve that relationship.

“As a corporate manager, and being very detail-oriented, I was attracted to the problematic issues involved in dealing with a company’s assets,” says Huskey, describing what initially drew her to the industry.

Throughout her career, Huskey has designed loss prevention programs, conducted audits, and implemented and enforced physical security and safety policies to secure all manner of corporate assets. In her present position as general manager of Pacific Video & Security in La Mesa, California, she oversees the day-to-day operation of the company’s service, inventories, personnel, facilities, record keeping, and administrative activities.

Huskey, a Certified Fraud Examiner (CFE) who also holds a master’s degree in security management, earned her Certified Protection Professional (CPP) designation from ASIS in 1997 and speaks highly of the value of the credential in her career.

“The CPP has empowered me with comprehensive knowledge to better articulate and communicate within the company I work for, as well as with a wide range of customers,” she says, adding that the certification has served her employer well too, in ways ranging from additional recognition in the industry to increased volume of business referrals.

In word and in example, she is a strong proponent of the ASIS certification program and the organization’s other initiatives designed to advance both the individual security practitioner and the industry as a whole.

“I strongly recommend certification and participation in ASIS’s resources,” Huskey says. “I know firsthand that the security industry is the wave of the future. We need educated and certified individuals who are recognized not only in our industry but in the corporate and business worlds as well.”

An ASIS member since 1993, Huskey has served in a variety of volunteer leadership positions with the San Diego chapter, ranging from newsletter editor to chapter chair. She was the fourth recipient of the Richard Sampson Leadership Award issued by the chapter in 2001, and received the Outstanding CPP award issued by ASIS Region III CPP division in 2002.
