Australian PM Unveils Anti-Vehicle Terror Strategy After Barcelona Attack

In the wake of the deadly Barcelona terror attack, in which a vehicle was once again used to mow down innocent people in a crowded area, Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull has revealed a strategy to tackle the growing use of vehicles in terror attacks.

Under the strategy, managers and staff at crowded public places will receive government and police help to plan to detect and deter terrorist attacks involving vehicles, like those seen in Barcelona, Nice, and London.

Singapore's emphasis on the security of its critical infrastructures is necessary to safeguard general public safety and compel these systems to keep pace with current security landscape.

The country's proposed cybersecurity bill, unveiled last month, outlined measures to protect local critical information infrastructures (CIIs) and ensure swift response to threats and incidents. It listed 11 "essential services" sectors considered to operate CIIs: water, healthcare, maritime, media, infocommunications, energy, banking and finance, security and emergency services, land transport, aviation, and the government.
