ASIS Europe 2017 - New Training Modules Confirmed

Alongside the conference programme at ASIS Europe 2017, which will focus on the blurring of lines between physical and cyber threats, a new format of Training Modules has been introduced.

The Training Modules are designed to offer practical learning with maximum affordability and flexibility. Modules can be purchased for just €75 each or in bundles by day. Registration also includes the Show Pass for access to the Exhibition, the Technology and Solutions Track, and the ASIS Europe Career Centre - also making a debut appearance in Milan.

Five of the six modules are already confirmed:

- How to Structure and Implement a Travel Risk Management Programme
- Fundamentals of Cybersecurity for non-IT Professionals
- Fundamentals of Cyber-Physical Security
- Crisis Management Best Practices
- Social Engineering - Be Aware!

Ireland Chapter AGM

By John Murphy

The ASIS International Ireland Chapter AGM was hosted by Indeed (the world's number 1 job site), at its EMEA headquarters in Dublin on 23 November. John Bailey was re-elected as the chapter chair. The chapter also welcomed Bill Enright, PCI, and Bogdan Danita to the chapter committee as education officer and Web and social media officer, respectively. The meeting focused on planning 2017 activities. The chapter is working on a revised format for the delivery of CPP preparation courses, as well as looking at CPE training for existing board-certified members and a variety of educational seminars for members.

John Murphy is Ireland Chapter Secretary and vice president, global corporate security at BNY Mellon.

Austria Chapter October Meeting at OMV

By Werner Preining, CPP

On 17 November, the ASIS International Austria Chapter met at the premises of OMV, the Austrian National Oil Company. The meeting combined the chapter general assembly together with educational sessions and

New Belgian Law Gives More Work to Private Security Companies

Jan Jambon

Private security company employees could do preventative "sweepings" of sites for authorities and offer technical support to police. This was announced by the Home Affairs Minister Jan Jambon during a press conference on Saturday. Because of this new law, security guards could sweep buildings and land to look for spy equipment, weapons, drugs, and explosives. The law was adopted by the government after a first reading on Friday. Read more here.

Good News, Bad News for Risk on the High Seas

Global piracy on the high seas is trending toward kidnap for ransom and away from hijacking, according to a new report. "Piracy has changed in the past three years," said Devlin McStay, data analyst at IHS Maritime and Trade, which released the report. "The number of piracy attacks is decreasing overall, but kidnapping is becoming more common," McStay said in a statement. "We are seeing the number of kidnappings rise in the piracy hotspots of Southeast Asia and West Africa."
