ASIS Europe 2017 will cover everything from best practices in global enterprises to career paths for young professionals.

With the focus on today's connected enterprise, it was recently announced that Carlo Purassanta, general manager of Microsoft Italy will provide the opening keynote at the conference. Purassanta will leverage his deep knowledge of rapidly evolving digital businesses to help delegates understand the current and near future needs of businesses, consumers, shareholders, and communities -- setting the parameters within which security professionals need to operate.

At the closure of the early rate period, the conference has received an unprecedented number of registrations from senior security practitioners in large enterprises.

ASIS members are reminded that this year, the new format provides much more than the conference, and registration options span many interests and budgets.

New! The of the Career Center programme has just been published. It includes career coaching, resumé reviews, sessions for YPs and WiS, advice on preparing for a job interview, information on certification, executive education and much more, all part of the Show Pass available free online until 28 March (also includes the Technology & Solutions track and the exhibition).

Training modules available for just €75 each cover key issues in a focused, compact format.

The ASIS International Aegean Chapter successfully held its 8th annual congress on 26 January 2017 at the Intercontinental Hotel, Athens.

The programme included four speakers:

- Michael Lolis, lieutenant of the Greek Police spoke on "Human rights, racism and discrimination: The social dimension and legal protection."
- Mr. Polycarpos Adamidis, professor of law, shared his views on the "Modern institutional framework of security."
- Mr. Andreas Konstantakopoulos, former major of the Greek Police and president of the Negotiators' Union, presented the topic, "Strategic management and holistic approach to crisis."
- Mr. Angelos Agrafiotis, chair of the ASIS Aegean Chapter and general manager of the company A&K Risk Management Consulting, spoke on the subject, "Intelligence: Dynamic information."

The programme prompted substantial interaction between the audience and the presenters. Participants included security managers of banks, companies, institutions and other members of the Aegean Chapter. Also, in attendance were representatives from the national security and safety scene as well as executives from security magazines.

Attendees and speakers had the opportunity to get to know one other and exchange opinions on the presentations during the networking break. In concluding the meeting, honorary plaques were awarded to the speakers for their contribution to the conference.

New Book: Getting the First Step Right

ASIS International has published a new text on risk assessment by Jean Perois, CPP, PCI, PSP: Getting the First Step Right: A Risk Assessment Guide for the Security Manager.

This new publication contains both theoretical content and tales of personal experience based on the author's decades of performing security risk assessments in the Middle East, particularly in the Arab countries of the Persian Gulf. While most security practitioners will follow the steps of a written risk assessment methodology, Perois shares valuable insights with his fellow practitioners by warning them about the minefield that an SRA can become.

The author made mistakes on the job and found himself in embarrassing situations more than once. If the reader avoids even a few of these mistakes, this book will have served its purpose. View the table of contents.

An Executive Order signed by U.S. President Donald Trump in his first few days in office could jeopardize a six-month-old data transfer framework that enables EU citizens' personal data to flow to the U.S. for processing -- with the promise of 'essentially equivalent' privacy protection once it gets there. Close to 1,500 companies have signed up to the framework so far, which only got up and running in August, following a multi-year negotiation process.

UK Security Qualifications Fraud is a 'Public Safety Risk'

The head of an exam board is warning that undetected qualifications fraud in the security industry is becoming a "risk to public safety". Raymond Clarke, chief executive of Industry Qualifications, is calling for tougher scrutiny to prevent fraud in workplace qualifications. And when it applies to security staff, he says, such fraud is a "significant threat to public safety and wellbeing". Exam watchdog Ofqual said it had "a number of ongoing investigations".

Telecoms Regulator Takes Aim at Commission Plan for Cybersecurity Labels

The top EU telecoms regulator criticised the European Commission's plans to introduce this spring a labelling scheme to rank the cybersecurity of Internet-connected devices, arguing it would only reinforce big tech companies' dominance. "I think this is an idea that must really be challenged," Sébastien Soriano, chair of French telecoms regulator Arcep and this year's leader of Berec, the group of telecoms watchdogs from European countries, told EurActiv.com on 1 February.

The Commission is getting ready to present a method for certifying whether technology companies meet strict privacy standards, which is intended as a way to make consumers trust Internet-connected machines at a time when the EU executive is encouraging firms to develop the so-called Internet of Things. Internet-connected devices can range from refrigerators that tell owners when to stock up on food to cars with automated brakes and entertainment systems.
