The ASIS Aegean Chapter, based in Athens, Greece, hosted what is believed to be the first counterterrorism seminar held in that nation. The seminar took place in June at the New York College-Athens' examination center.

The seminar was delivered by subject matter experts including Athanasios Balafas, operational officer-fireman, who discussed fire safety; and Angelos Agrafiotis, president of the Aegean Chapter and a special cases consultant, who reviewed the most influential terrorist groups active in Greece and incidents they have perpetrated.

The event was attended by 41 security and safety professionals, who included security executives and practitioners from Greece's most important industries, companies, and banking institutions, as well as private security consultants.

France Chapter Chair Speaks at Eurosatory 2014

On 18 June, during Eurosatory 2014 in Paris, ASIS International France Chapter Chair Eric Davoine made a presentation on the ANSI/ASIS standard, Management System for Quality of Private Security Company Operations -- Requirements with Guidance (ANSI/ASIS PSC.1-2012). The standard seeks to operationalise the International Code of Conduct within a formal structure familiar to businesses. That structure, with national and international supervision, provides auditable procedures for the development of the standard, certification to it, and monitoring of ongoing compliance.

Davoine is security manager at Natixis of Croissy Beaubourg, France.

Eurosatory is an international defense and security exhibition, which takes place every two years in Paris. This year, more than 55,000 people attended the event.

France Chapter Debates Preemployment Screening

The ASIS International France Chapter held a debate on 14 June at the Marriott Rive-Gauche in Paris. The subject of the debate, which was held during dinner, was preemployment screening. Speakers were lawyer Me Anne Quentier and private investigator Jean-Eric Bardin.

About thirty persons attended the debate, including CSOs and human resource managers, as well as chapter members. Participation by attendees in the discussions was plentiful.

Ireland Chapter Discusses the Future of Security

John McHugh, CPP, during his presentation at the Ireland Chapter meeting.

On 11 June, the ASIS International Ireland Chapter held a meeting that focused on the future of security. The event was attended by 25 members and invited guests.

John McHugh, CPP, senior investigations manager with the Microsoft Digital Crimes Unit, spoke about how his career has evolved from guard service to his current role. McHugh also provided insight into how the Digital Crimes Unit protects Microsoft's customers, brand, and physical and digital products. His message of embracing technology and change is an important one for future security managers.

Additionally, Chapter Education Officer Diarmuid O'Neill made a presentation on the benefits of ASIS membership and board certifications, advising the members of an upcoming Certified Protection Professional® (CPP) study group that will commence in September. O'Neill also announced Physical Security Professional® and Professional Certified Investigator® study groups that will be held in months to come.

The CEO of Netwatch, David Walsh, gave an interesting presentation on off-site monitoring and discussed how Netwatch is developing software that will deliver added value to their clients.

Finally, Pete Brown from Securitas gave a presentation on the role technology will play in the future of security guard services.

Austria Chapter Tours Austrian Federal Railways Facility Management Services

Rainhard Grotti (center, back to camera) led an Austria Chapter tour of Austrian Federal Railways Facility Management Services.

On 12 June, members of the ASIS Austria Chapter met at the Austrian Federal Railways Facility Management Services (FMS) in Vienna. The invitation came from ASIS Member Rainhard Grotti, who holds a management position within the service.

FMS provides uniformed security officers for the federal railway. These officers perform multiple functions at Austria's train stations. Chapter members were shown the security control room, where all emergency calls are received and emergency messages and technical alarms from the eastern part of Austria are dispatched. The control room can also monitor video from cameras installed in train stations and other railroad properties.

After the tour, Fischer made a presentation to the chapter about copper theft. He said that as copper theft became a threat to the safe operations of Austria's trains, a strategy was developed to combat this crime with security officers as the spearheads. Because of their involvement, the theft of copper and other rare metals has decreased markedly.

Speakers Sought for ASIS Europe 2015

There are many reasons to submit a presentation proposal for the ASIS International 14th European Security Conference & Exhibition (ASIS Europe 2015):

- Share your expertise and knowledge with your security-industry peers.
- Give something back to the security management profession.
- Help shape the programme of the main educational event for security professionals in Europe.
- Enhance your profile as a thought leader in your area of expertise.

The deadline for speaker submissions for ASIS Europe 2015 is 15 September.

ASIS Europe 2015 will take place on 29-31 March in Frankfurt, Germany.

Security experts gathered in The Hague last April to network, problem solve, and explore the terrain of the ever-evolving security landscape. This video will share some of the event's highlights.

Speak Up

Security experts are invited to submit proposals for educational sessions that focus on current and emerging issues, best practices, and the challenges facing security practitioners. Presentations are designed for those at all levels of experience -- from fundamental to intermediate to advanced topics.

Proposals on all security-related topics are welcome. Issues of particular interest are:

- Critical infrastructure protection
- Physical security
- Cyber security
- Supply chain security
- Intellectual property
- Loss prevention
- Hotel security and soft targets protection
- Maritime piracy
- Terrorism
- Executive protection
- Internal theft and fraud
- Competitive intelligence
- Brand protection
- Investigations
- Due diligence
- Global business issues such as sustainability, CSR and corporate governance
- Oil and gas security
- Offshore security
- Port security

General submission guidelines:

- Submissions must be noncommercial. (Twenty-minute speaking slots in the exhibition area are available as part of the exhibitor package.)
- ASIS does not pay per diems, honoraria, or travel and other expenses.
- Presentation slots are 50 minutes including time for Q&A.
- Proposals must be in English only.
- Proposals should describe original work.
- All submissions must be received no later than Monday, 15 September.

Security Management Reborn

Logo of the new Security Management App, available at iTunes App Store or Google Play.

Security Management, the flagship publication of ASIS International, can now be delivered to your Android or Apple tablet. The Security Management app is available as a free download to ASIS members and magazine subscribers from the iTunes App Store or Google Play.

The full-colour app "is an exciting new development," says Editor in Chief Teresa Anderson. The Security Management digital app delivers a replica of the print magazine each month, but "it provides all types of extra content that readers cannot receive in print format," including video charts, multimedia, and interviews."

"All of the information is at your fingertips, regardless of whether you are on business travel or in the office" says Nello Caramat, Security Management director of production and creative services.

"It's one package, one application, delivered seamlessly to your tablet each month," Caramat adds.

"The app is the latest development in an across-the-board revamping of the print and online magazine. The striking new look debuted last March with a classy, reader-friendly redesign. Changes were based on feedback from members, advances in publishing technology, and the continuing mandate to deliver the most timely and critical news to the magazine's 38,000 readers.

It had been ten years since the magazine had altered its overall format. "The world had changed," says Anderson. "The striking, bold cover design reflects the boldness of the security industry and its impact on the world."

Roundtable sessions with readers at recent Seminars and Exhibits led to changes in the editorial content, according to Anderson. International coverage, for example, is spreading into every department, not just one. The topic of managing, which was a department, is now a full feature in each issue to showcase its importance. A new department, "Cybersecurity," highlights the security manager's need to protect sensitive data and proprietary information.

Pop colours give the reader visual cues that connect the up-front departments. Bright vertical colors draw readers into familiar columns such as "Legal Report," "Industry News," and "Marketplace."

A priority in the year-long, top-to-bottom review and repositioning of all Security Management products was to make the print or digital content thematically integrated. A revamped Security Management Online now includes coverage of breaking security stories and issues. A more powerful search function allows users to find thousands of archived Security Management articles and supplemental materials.

Additionally, an all-digital edition of the Security Management Buyers Guide includes information from exhibitors as well as other sources of information on security product and service technologies. Security Management Daily and Security Management Weekly will continue to be published on the same schedule, but will be integrated with the news in other Security Management products.

"We've enhanced what our readers think is best about Security Management and all of its related print and digital products," says Michael Gips, ASIS vice president of publishing. "And we're presenting that content in ways that will make readers rush to open their magazine - whether in print or on a device of their choice - to enjoy the aesthetic experience inside."

CRISP Report Tackles Supply Chain Security

The Research Council of the ASIS Foundation announces the release of the latest addition to its series of Connecting Research in Security to Practice (CRISP) reports, "Situational Crime Prevention and Supply Chain Security." The report focuses on situational crime prevention in domestic and international supply chains. Its author, Harald Haelterman Ph.D., has created a reference guide on introducing a situational crime prevention programme to a business environment.

Haelterman presents an approach in six consecutive stages, emphasizing the importance of addressing challenges early and focusing on the selection of alternative measures to mitigate identified risks. While the approach is illustrated in a transportation and logistics environment, it is equally applicable to other industries, the public sector, and to virtually any type of criminal or disruptive behaviour.

A PDF version of this report can be downloaded for free from the ASIS Foundation's homepage at www.asisonline.org. Hard copies can be purchased in the same site or through the ASIS Store at two prices: Members: USD $5; nonmembers: USD $10.

Launched in 2008, CRISP reports provide practical, research-based solutions to help security professionals effectively tackle a range of security issues. The ASIS Research Council invites experts in specialized aspects of security to present their views on a specific security concern. The reports provide concise summaries of available research, deliver expert analysis, and offer proven approaches and best practices, which readers can integrate into existing or planned programs.

CRISP reports are sister publications to those produced by Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) of the U.S. Department of Justice. COPS reports, which can be accessed at www.cops.usdoj.gov, focus on policing, while CRISP reports focus on security.

The Research Council welcomes new ideas and research proposals. Persons interested in writing a CRISP report can find guidance under Foundation Research link, also at www.asisonline.org.

ASIS/Wharton Programme Changes Announced

The Security Executive Leadership Programme is now leaner, stronger, and faster.

The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and ASIS International have undertaken changes to the highly respected Wharton/ASIS Programme in Security Executive Leadership. Starting in November, the programme will be conducted in one week at the Wharton School in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA. This compression in course length from nine days to six is aimed at making it easier for prospective students to attend, while not affecting either the programme's quality or the value of the Wharton/ASIS Certificate.

Since 2004, ASIS has offered the programme to its members and other security professionals who are ready to advance to a higher level of management education and effectiveness. In the decade since, 241 students from 19 countries have attended. The purpose of the programme is to take these executives beyond professional education in security by exposing them to the world of management concerns and decision-making at the highest levels. Attendees gain insights into how they may influence those decisions.

The programme has historically been presented in two sessions-the first during one week in November, followed by another week-long session in February. Now it will be consolidated into a single November session. To do this without sacrificing quality, significant steps have been taken that will make the program more focused and intense:

- Several courses will be eliminated as separate entities but their key content will be worked into other blocks of instruction.
- The programme will increase the use of case studies to spur discussion and focus learning on key objectives. In developing the case studies, particular attention will be paid to situations faced by senior security executives and the input from senior security executives, especially alumni of the program, will be sought.
- More evening and weekend work will be required, and students will be housed at the Wharton School's Steinberg Conference Center to more fully immerse them in the programme.

Students will benefit from the revised programme in several ways: They will commit one week of their time instead of a fortnight. Perhaps most significant, however, is that the tuition will be greatly reduced.

While numerous chief security officers and their deputies have attended the programme in the past, it is not limited to executives of any particular level. In fact, several corporations have made participation in the programme a part of their suggested career track for security managers.

More information about the revamped Wharton/ASIS Programme in Security Executive Leadership will be available later this summer.

ASIS Accolades Awards Entry Period Open

ASIS International invites companies exhibiting at the ASIS 60th Annual Seminar and Exhibits (ASIS 2014) or the collocated (ISC)² Security Congress 2014 to enter ASIS 2014 Accolades: Security's Best, an awards competition that recognizes the security industry's most innovative new products and service solutions. The programme, which is for products or services launched after 26 September 2013 will accept submissions through 31 July. Winners will be announced at the ASIS 2014 Networking Luncheon on Monday, 29 September, at the Georgia World Congress Center in Atlanta.

More than 20,000 security professionals from 90 countries are expected to attend the Seminar and Exhibits and (ISC)² Security Congress 2014 taking place 29 September - 2 October. ((ISC)² is the largest not-for-profit membership body of certified information and software security professionals.)

A team of judges representing experts in security technologies will select up to 10 winners based on their level of innovation, unique attributes, and specific benefit to the security industry. In addition, ASIS 2014 an (ISC)² Security Congress 2014 attendees will have an opportunity to vote for their favourite submission on Monday, 29 September, and Tuesday, 30 September, via the mobile application and at kiosks located in the Accolades Showcase on the exhibit floor. The People's Choice Award will be presented on Wednesday, 1st October, at the networking luncheon.

The Accolades competition provides an opportunity for companies to distinguish their new products and services at the show and in the marketplace. For complete entry details, visit the Accolades Web page. For questions regarding the ASIS 2014 Accolades Competition, please contact mary.higham@asisonline.org.

Join the Member-Get-a-Member Campaign

Be a Part of the Member-Get-a-Member Campaign

The 2014 ASIS International Member-Get-a-Member campaign is more than half over, but there's still time to add the names of the members you've recruited to the ASIS membership roll. A vital and growing membership means greater recognition of the security profession worldwide along with improved educational and networking opportunities for all. And, if that wasn't enough, there are prizes for participants.

If you need a list of all the benefits of ASIS membership, go to the ASIS Web site, www.asisonline.org, and click on the Membership tab. Here are some of the things that membership offers:

- Networking: The online Member Directory gives access to colleagues worldwide. Councils and chapters allow members to share best practices. And ASIS on social media -- LinkedIn, Twitter, and Facebook -- makes resources just a click away.

- Information: Security Management is the top publication in the field. ASIS Dynamics, the quarterly member magazine, keeps members up to date on ASIS-related news from around the world. The ASIS Information Resource Center puts historic, academic, and state-of-the art resources at your fingertips. The Security Management Buyers Guide and the Protection of Assets Manual are indispensable professional resources.
- Professional Development: Top-rated educational programmes in many formats and worldwide locations and the Annual ASIS Seminar and Exhibits offer knowledge of a superior professional value. The Online Store offers preferred pricing on hundreds of security resources.
- Credentials: The Certified Protection Professional®, Professional Certified Investigator®, and Physical Security Professional® designations are recognized worldwide as standards of professional competency.

When convincing a colleague to join his or peers who are already benefiting from ASIS, your personal affirmation of ASIS has done you is greatest proof that can be offered. Sharing your personal successes and the r ASIS has played in them is the key to bring new members into the fold.

Need an incentive? By recruiting just two new members in the last quarter of 2014 you will be entered into a drawing to win special prizes. In the first quarter of the year, ASIS members who brought in two colleagues won an Apple iPad. You can do it, too.

The friendly competition ends on 31 December, and final awards will be announced in January.

EU Overview

EU Internal Security Strategy: a New Impetus

The European Commission published a report assessing the progress made under each key area of the EU Internal Security Strategy (ISS) since 2010, as well as identifying possible ways to step up the EU's response to common threats such as organised crime, human trafficking, terrorism, cybercrime, and corruption.

While the objectives of the strategy remain valid, concrete measures and actions must be reviewed. Ahead of the 2015 adoption of a renewed Internal Security Strategy, the Commission will consult the member states, the European Parliament, and the private sector, civil society, and the research sector via methods that will include a high-level conference this autumn.

Protecting Critical Infrastructure From Cyber Attacks

The Web site Debating Europe published a post on 10 July in the aftermath of an event held by the think tank Security and Defence Agenda (SDA) on "Critical Infrastructure Protection in the Cyber Age."

Critical infrastructure includes all necessary facilities that a country needs to take care of its citizens, ranging from government Web sites and banking services to air traffic control and the supply of energy. As critical infrastructure becomes increasingly reliant on Internet connectivity, these systems are at risk of malicious attacks, often state-sponsored.

The post includes the views of Jason Healey, director of the Cyber Statecraft Initiative at the Atlantic Council, and other critical infrastructure protection experts such as Special Assistant to the U.S. President and Cybersecurity Coordinator Michael Daniel, and Sigrid Johannisse, advisor on cybersecurity to European Commissioner for the Digital Agenda Neelie Kroes.

Network and Information Security Vs. EU Data Protection Regulation

According to the think tank Security and Defence, public trust in the Internet has been hit hard by increasingly frequent and complex cyber attacks, a rise in cybercrime, and a spate of international spying scandals. A Eurobarometer poll on cybersecurity found that 38 percent of European Internet users have changed their behaviour because of cybersecurity concerns. Eighteen percent say they are less likely to buy online goods and 15 percent are less likely to use online banking. The poll also shows that 74 percent of the respondents agreed that the risk of becoming a victim has increased, 12 percent have already experienced online fraud, and 89 percent avoid disclosing personal information.

The EU is trying to ensure an open, safe and secure cyberspace through two policy measures:

First, a directive was issued in February 2013 to establish more robust information security requirements for all member states, key Internet enablers, and critical infrastructure operators such as e-commerce platforms, social networks, and operators in energy, transport, banking, and healthcare services.

Second, a comprehensive reform is underway of the EU's 1995 data protection rules. This will strengthen online privacy rights and boost Europe's digital economy. The result will be to reinforce consumer confidence in online services, thereby providing a much needed boost to growth, jobs, and innovation in Europe.
