ASIS International and top-ranked IE Business School have delivered the Effective Management for Security Professionals course 3 to 6 June, in Madrid, Spain.

The course was attended by 13 security professionals from 10 countries including the United Arab Emirates, Argentina, France, Guatemala, Norway, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sweden and The Netherlands. These participants of this edition belong to the security executive management from companies such as Saudi Aramco, Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, Eni, FM Logistics, Mapfre, Novartis, Repsol, Sony Pictures, Statkraft and Vitem.

Effective Management for Security Professionals is an international executive program specifically designed to assist mid- to-senior security managers in developing their business acumen to become more effective managers and leaders within their organization. The program focuses on business fundamentals and helps participants develop a salient voice in business matters. Included in the curriculum were 15 educational sessions, a business case, a roundtable, and additional modules related to negotiation, corporate government, and decision making.

ASIS Accolades Awards Entry Period Open

ASIS International invites companies exhibiting at the ASIS 60th Annual Seminar and Exhibits (ASIS 2014) or the collocated (ISC)<sup>2</sup> Security Congress 2014 to enter the ASIS 2014 Accolades: Security's Best, an awards competition that recognises the security industry's most innovative new products and service solutions. The programme, which is for products or services launched after 26 September 2013, opens on 5 May. The submission deadline is 31 July, and winners will be announced at the ASIS 2014 Networking Luncheon on Monday, 29 September, at the Georgia World Congress Center in Atlanta.

More than 20,000 security professionals from 90 countries are expected to attend the Seminar and Exhibits and the collocated (ISC)<sup>2</sup> Security Congress 2014 taking place 29 September-2 October. ((ISC)<sup>2</sup> is the largest not-for-profit membership body of certified information and software security professionals worldwide.)

A team of judges representing experts in security technologies will select up to 10 winners based on their level of innovation, unique attributes, and specific benefit to the security industry. In addition, ASIS 2014 and (ISC)<sup>2</sup> Security Congress 2014 attendees will have an opportunity to vote for their favourite submission on Monday, 29 September, and Tuesday, 30 September, via the mobile application and kiosks located in the Accolades Showcase on the exhibit floor. The People's Choice Award will be presented on Wednesday, 1 October, at the networking luncheon.

EU Overview

Yearly Report on Terrorism in EU

A total of 152 terrorist attacks were carried out in the EU last year. There was also a sustained number of Europeans taken hostage by groups or individuals linked to religiously inspired terrorism. The yearly EU Terrorism Situation and Trend Report from the European police authority, Europol, released on 28 May, summarises the extent of this security threat.

In 2013, seven people died as a result of terrorist attacks in the EU, and 535 individuals were arrested for terrorism-related offences. The largest proportion of terrorist attacks in the EU was related to separatist groups, although the number significantly decreased in 2013 compared to previous years. The majority of EU member states continue to consider religiously inspired terrorism as a major threat, as evidenced by the significant increase in the number of arrests. Two attacks and several disrupted plots in 2013 illustrate this threat.

European Cybercrime Centre at Europol Supports International Action Against Sophisticated Malware

On Friday, 30 May 2014, law enforcement agencies from across the world, supported by the European Cybercrime

Centre (EC3) at Europol, joined forces in a coordinated action led by the FBI which ensured the disruption of the Gameover Zeus botnet and the seizure of computer servers crucial to the malicious software known as CryptoLocker.

U.S. authorities identified a 30 year old suspect from Anapa, Russian Federation, as a leader of the cyber criminals behind Gameover Zeus. The FBI has added him to the Cyber's Most Wanted section on their Web site.

Gameover Zeus, also known as 'Peer-to-Peer Zeus', is an extremely sophisticated type of malware designed to steal banking and other credentials from the computers it infects. It then uses those credentials to initiate or redirect wire transfers to accounts controlled by cyber criminals. It is the latest version of a malware family that appeared in 2007 and security researchers estimate between 500.000 and one million computers worldwide are infected. Known losses caused by the malware are estimated to be around €75 million.

The Gameover Zeus network of infected computers also distributes the ransomware known as CryptoLocker. In October last year, EC3 sent out an alert concerning CryptoLocker that encrypts all files of the victim's computer, extorting an amount of USD $750 or more to receive the password necessary to unlock the files. Security researchers estimate that, as of April 2014, CryptoLocker had infected more than 234 000 computers. Furthermore, the FBI estimates that over USD $27 million in ransom payments were made in just the first two months since it emerged.

Boosting Europe's Defence Against Terrorism

Cecilia Malmström, European commissioner for home affairs. The Directorate General for Home Affairs conducted the preparatory work for a communication on a new EU approach to the detection and mitigation of CBRN-E risks that was released on 5 May.

How can the EU work to prevent chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear materials and explosives (CBRN-E) from ending up in the hands of terrorists? On 5 May, the European Commission proposed to strengthen Europe's efforts to better detect explosives and dangerous materials, intensify research across Europe, and promote awareness in member states.

Terrorist attacks such as those in Madrid, London, Moscow and at the Boston Marathon illustrate the high level of innovation of attackers and the relative ease with which some CBRN-E materials and components can be obtained.

That is why the European Commission proposes to facilitate practical cooperation for the detection and mitigation of CBRN-E risks at the EU level, including working with the industry, operators of facilities handling CBRN-E materials such as equipment manufacturers and security services providers, and other stakeholders. Concrete tools will be developed, ranging from guidance materials, training and awareness building, and testing activities.

The Commission proposes concrete actions aiming at:

- More effective detection, including better addressing insider threats and to test CBRN-E detection equipment through practical trials.
- Better research, testing, and validation. Under the 7th Framework Programme (FP7), approximately 60 CBRN-related projects were funded and more than 15 of these focused on explosives. The new EU research programme Horizon 2020 will continue this work.
- Promoting awareness building, training, and exercises. More work will be done to enhance training initiatives, as well as improving awareness and capacity, by sharing best practices and developing guidance material.
- Supporting efforts outside the EU. The Commission will support preparedness and detection measures in non-EU countries where appropriate, in particular through technical assistance, training, and the sharing of information and best practices.

Auditors Slams EU's Schengen Information System

The Schengen Information System is the largest information system for public security in Europe. By allowing for easy information exchanges between national border control, customs and police authorities, it ensures that the free movement of people within the EU can take place in a safe environment.

Euractiv reports that the European Court of Auditors has criticised financial setbacks and delays of the new Schengen Information System, a border control software that has cost eight times more than its initial budget.

The Schengen Information System II (SIS) is used by customs, police, and all visa authorities in the 26-country Schengen area. It is a database contains alerts about people who have committed serious crimes or who are not allowed to cross European borders. It also contains information on missing and wanted persons and lost or stolen goods such as bank notes, cars, firearms, or identity documents. Alerts and other information can be added to the system by national authorities.

The magnitude and implementation of antiterrorist and immigration programmes have been at the centre of debate by the European Commission. In 2009, the European Parliament voted to set up SIS II, a system supposed to take over from SIS I in 2013, with an initial budget of €68 million.

Costs have since increased markedly. The European Court of Auditors announced that the budget for the SIS II's central computer was €189 million, to which must be added an extra €330 million to pay for national variations of the system. It amounted to €519 million, a total much higher than the initial €68 million.

In a report, the Court of Auditors blamed the European Commission for not committing enough experts to oversee the project and subsequent time extensions. It also questioned the impact of the new system compared to its predecessor, SIS I, which was used by the member states with great success. According to the European Court of Auditors, the commission did not prove the efficiency of SIS II relative to its costs.

Leaders

SRVP's Column: Introduction to *EuroDynamics

Dear Colleagues,

As the ASIS International EMEA Bureau in Brussels prepares this edition of EuroDynamics, the Programme Committee is about to meet for final planning of the ASIS 13th European Security Conference & Exhibition.

This unique programme, which will be held at the World Forum in The Hague, The Netherlands, from 1-3 April, 2014, will address a full spectrum of topics. These include: retail facility protection, supply chain security, loss prevention, hotel security, intellectual property, oil and gas security, maritime piracy, counter-terrorism, executive protection, internal theft and fraud, competitive intelligence, brand protection, physical security, cyber security, investigators, and due diligence.

ASIS International invites members to submit articles to be published in future editions of EuroDynamics.

Whether the topic is a case study about a facility, an analysis of new legislation in your nation, an article about mitigating threats a look at fresh opportunities for the security profession, or other items that spread practitioner knowledge and best practices with other ASIS members, we would be happy to receive it.

Board certified professionals are entitled to claim up to 9 CPE credits per published article.

General writing guidelines:

- Articles must be in English only.
- Articles should not exceed 500 words.
- If you would like to submit longer articles, please send a 500-word summary that will be published in the newsletter and on the ASIS European Web site with a link to the full article.
- Sales or marketing submissions will not be accepted.
